USPA NEWS - Hello to all readers of this news. On the day that passed, it was the 34th anniversary of the death of Ayatollah Khomeini. The people of Iran are currently experiencing a complete darkness. In these times when everyone is trying to silence their calls for freedom, this pain is constant among the Iranian people. It all started with a grave mistake made by the Iranian nation in 1979 when they welcomed Ayatollah Khomeini into their lives, which marked a dark and bitter chapter in their history. This mistake was so significant that it not only endangered the Iranian people but eventually posed serious threats to the entire world. Unfortunately, many governments with a culture of human rights and compassion have not yet realized that the Iranian people do not accept the ruling regime in Iran under the name of the Islamic Republic in any way. Moreover, it is even more challenging that human rights organizations still praise the Islamic Republic, which holds the highest execution rate, and give them a platform

"Ali Khamenei,

by referring to the noble and respectable people of Iran as lowlives and thugs, demonstrates himself as a delusional dictator. Due to his misguided policies, the Iranian people are enduring the harshest international sanctions and experiencing a period of darkness. Furthermore, since the start of nationwide protests in Iran after the government's killing of young girls like Mahsa Amini by the security forces and the severe massacre of around 600 Iranian citizens, especially a significant number of children, Ali Khamenei is perceived by Iranians as a delusional and insane dictator. Among the Iranian people, he openly presents himself as a god and labels all opponents as lowlives, thugs, and enemies of Iran. However, this demonstrates the great fear of this dictator. Dictators have a characteristic belief that they are more powerful than anyone else, but the Iranian people strongly believe that until 15 minutes before the fall of a dictatorship, everything seems normal. The Iranian people have been fighting vigorously for peace, kindness, and a peaceful world, risking their lives against a savage regime like the Islamic Republic for a long time.
